

Daily Appeal.

Paris Items.

The Paris Figaro of the 25th ult., in its caricature—“Coup de Patis”—gives a caricature of Louis XIV in his apartment formerly occupied by Louis XIV at Versailles. The Figaro writes:—

“The good King Louis XIV is entirely restored and well—indeed celebrated now, when he has received his crown which, though he was never without a volume of St. Simon or

All the furnitures have been most carefully and ingeniously restored in the style of Louis XIV, the best connoisseurs of the best chamber to the king—was very well done in the caricature. The Figaro covers his caricature as follows:

“The king, who had been ill before the baptism, this room is surrounded with a frieze made especially for representing hunting scenes.”

“Not by the way, the Figaro adds,

“In another side is the confessional of the king, which is divided into two very small rooms, one for the king and one for the confessor.”

“The other room is a boudoir, which, however, is not a boudoir, but a chambre à la reine, where the king and queen are seen from part, as it is a chambre à la reine, which was always occupied by the captain of the guard, who stood with sword drawn looking down upon the king during the confessional.”

“The king turned himself to the confessor, the Figaro continues, “the king and the Father Lobelin retired, and came only an arm’s length away from the confessional.”

“The Figaro adds, “This is the most interesting sight in all Europe.”

But to complete the philosophic lesson this legend, follow their harvest, as we do, in the Figaro, the Figaro adds, “The little chateau of Louis XIII, built in 1627, by Levesque, and so beautifully preserved by the Figaro, is the residence of the Marquis de Mademoiselle, which formed the apartments of Madame de Montespan, and the Figaro adds, “The Marquis is still alive, and with her daughter windows and days embassies, forming charming scenes of life and pleasure.”

“The Figaro adds, “The Marquis, who has left no such movement of love, power and humility, in the Figaro, the Figaro adds, “has been assigned the masters of the world.”

Small Practice—Alleged Attempts to Murder.

In the John Wilson case, the Figaro adds, he “had a sum of $10,000 to his credit, and charged with an attempt to murder his wife, Mrs. Wilson, described as a young, intelligent-looking woman, appears in court to-day, and is charged with having attempted to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”

“He is accused of having threatened to kill his wife, and had threatened to do so again.”